Description

A lovely pair of brass and copper fireside vases dating from the mid to late 19th Century. They are modelled as a pair of ladies boots and have a small brass spill vase on the back of each one. They are good quality and very well made. They are in good condition for their age. There are signs of age and use, some small dents, dinks and surface marks but nothing untoward. They have been gently cleaned and polished and display well. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
