Description

A mid 18th century mahogany drop-leaf table dates to circa 1760. Crafted from richly patinated solid mahogany, it features an elegant oval top with twin drop leaves supported by swing legs, allowing for flexible use as a side table, dining table, or occasional piece. The table stands on turned legs terminating in classic pad feet, a distinctive hallmark of mid-Georgian design. With its compact proportions and timeless silhouette, this antique table suits both period interiors and contemporary settings looking to incorporate historical charm. Perfect as an antique console table, sofa table, or hallway piece. circa 1760 Width with sides up 100cm
