Description

An Edwardian mahogany bookcase, British, circa 1910. The upper glazed section features a pair of astragal glazed doors opening to three fitted shelves, while the lower section has two solid panelled doors enclosing additional shelving. The bookcase is detailed with a dentil moulded cornice and a simple plinth base. Constructed in mahogany with a polished finish, it provides generous storage for both display and concealed use. The proportions and clean lines reflect early 20th century English cabinetmaking.
