Description

Artist: Circle of Jozef Israëls (1824 - 1911) Title: A Half-Length Portrait of a Young Girl Sewing Period: Circa 1850-1880 Provenance: From a private London collection Watercolour on board (see conservation notes within the condition report). Inscribed to top right faintly in pencil 'Helen', the remaining words indecipherable. Indistinctly dated. Overall size with the frame is 47cm x 35cm x 4cm and the painting is measured at 37cm x 25cm Jozef Israëls (born January 27, 1824, Groningen, Netherlands, died August 12, 1911, The Hague) was a painter and etcher, often called the "Dutch Millet" (a reference to Jean-François Millet). Israëls was the leader of the Hague school of peasant genre painting, which flourished in the Netherlands between 1860 and 1900. He began his studies in Amsterdam and from 1845 to 1847 worked in Paris under the academic painters Horace Vernet and Paul Delaroche. His earliest works were romantic historical paintings, but after staying at Zandvoort in 1855 he concentrated on peasant scenes - usually with fishermen - which recall works by his contemporaries in France, especially Millet and Daumier. In 1870 Israëls moved from Amsterdam to The...
