Description

This is a fine pair of antique tincture bottles. An English, duo of glass apothecary jars, dating to the Georgian period, circa 1800. A superb and decorative example of early pharmaceutical glassware. Charming Georgian period apothecary bottles, ideal for collectors or period interiors. Crafted from quality antique glass, in original condition with attractive clarity. Embellished with gold foliate detail, lending an elegant decorative flourish. Each bottle fitted with a small glass ball stopper, seating neatly within a flared rim. Displaying desirable signs of light age and character, consistent with period use. Perfect for bathroom, kitchen, or display cabinet styling, or apothecary-themed décor. An excellent example of early 19th century chemist's glassware, these antique tincture bottles offer fine detail, timeless charm, and rich Georgian appeal. Delivered ready to display.
