Description

DESCRIPTION A handsome early 18th century Queen Anne burr walnut press cupboard dating from the first quarter of the 18th century, retaining exceptional colour, beautifully figured burr walnut veneers and a wonderfully mellow patina developed over more than 300 years. The moulded cornice sits above a blind cushion frieze and a pair of panelled cupboard doors enclosing three pull-out linen slides. Beneath are two short over two long graduated drawers, all retaining attractive figured burr walnut veneers and standing on later bun feet to the front with bracket feet to the rear. The cupboard is unusually constructed predominantly in oak, reflecting the quality and traditional construction methods of the period. The rich walnut veneers display particularly attractive figuring across both the doors and drawer fronts. Originally built as a linen press, the piece was adapted historically from an escritoire through the removal of the fitted interior, allowing the cupboard to provide practical storage while preserving its impressive period appearance. An elegant and highly decorative Queen Anne walnut cupboard with excellent colour, generous proportions and considerable presence. ...
