Description

This vintage Titus chronograph from the 1950s is a bold statement piece. The 37mm 18k yellow gold case highlights timeless elegance and craftsmanship—so much so that many of these were melted down for their gold value. But this one survived. The standout feature: a striking black gilt dial—rare for its era. It's beautifully preserved, with bronze-coloured hands and markers that contrast perfectly against the gilt finish. Specifications: Era: Circa 1950s Case: 37mm solid 18k yellow gold Dial: Black gilt dial with bronze-tone hands and hour markers Movement: Manual-wind chronograph Accuracy: Running at approximately +20 seconds per day Functions: All chronograph features fully operational Crystal: Well-preserved for its age Strap: Generic black leather strap (easily swapped to waterproof strap of your choice) Condition & Performance Excellent overall condition – very well maintained for a 70-year-old timepiece Fully functional chronograph – pushers engage cleanly Reliable accuracy – around +20s/day with mature movement Unpolished gold case – deep lugs and crisp edges still intact. Our View This Titus gold chronograph is a rare survivor from the 1950s—bold, e...
