Description

George V mahogany twin pillar dining table This elegant George V mahogany dining table beautifully reflects the refined craftsmanship of early 20th-century British design. Its rich mahogany surface is tastefully accented with satinwood cross-banding, providing a warm and sophisticated contrast. Designed with versatility in mind, the table includes a single central leaf—making it adaptable for both everyday meals and larger gatherings. Without the leaf, it offers a more intimate dining setting, perfect for close family dinners. The twin pedestal base features finely inlaid tripod legs, each ending in original cast brass castors, combining grace with functionality. Whether extended or compact, this table offers a timeless space to gather family and friends for shared meals and lasting memories.

Key Features:

- Crafted in the George V period from fine quality mahogany
- Satinwood cross-banded edge for a touch of elegance
- Includes one central leaf for adjustable dining space
- Usable with or without the leaf
- Twin inlaid tripod pedestal bases
- Original cast brass castors for smooth movement
- Ideal for both formal dining and everyday family use
