Description

A superb 19th century rosewood centre table, also suitable as a dining table, featuring an exquisite scalloped-edge top with stunning book-matched grain. Crafted from richly figured rosewood, this antique table boasts excellent colour, polish, and a warm patina developed over time. Supported by a finely carved tripod base with scrolling feet, this Victorian rosewood table is as elegant as it is functional. The tilting top mechanism remains intact and fully operational, allowing the piece to be displayed upright when not in use—ideal for showcasing the craftsmanship of the beautifully grained top. This versatile piece works equally well as a centre table for a hallway or drawing room, or as a compact dining table in a period interior.
