Description

A fine quality English rosewood side table dating to the late 19th century, circa 1890. The richly figured top is beautifully inlaid with a central marquetry motif and delicate crossbanding. This two-tier occasional table stands on finely turned legs with baluster spindles and elegant inlaid side panels, all raised on original brass castors. The lower shelf offers additional display or storage space, making the piece both functional and decorative. With its sophisticated proportions and intricate detailing, this antique rosewood table works beautifully as a lamp table, end table, or refined accent in a drawing room, study, or hallway. An exceptional example of period furniture that would suit both traditional and curated eclectic interiors. Origin: England Date: circa 1890 Material: Rosewood with marquetry inlay Condition: Excellent antique condition with a rich patina
