Description

An early 19th century Empire-style jardinière bucket, Dutch, circa 1830. Beautifully crafted in rich, well-figured mahogany with a flared slatted body, this elegant piece rests on a bold triform base with carved paw feet, typical of the Empire design aesthetic. The interior retains its original brass liner, making it a functional and decorative planter or wine cooler. Its sculptural form and refined proportions make it an ideal statement piece for a hallway, drawing room or conservatory. This antique mahogany jardinière combines neoclassical grandeur with practical elegance, appealing to collectors of Empire furniture and decorative interiors.
