Description

Large George V mahogany inlaid dining table This Large George V mahogany inlaid dining table was made in the first quarter of the 20th century. The cabinetmaker recycled antique timber to construct this impressive dining table. The twin pedestal supports with the splayed legs that are inlaid with stringing, come off the well turned central column, and end with the cast brass paw toes with the castors under. The table has a large extra leaf that you can put in place when you are needing a large seating need. (Although most people leave the leaf in place at all times as the tables look so good fully extended.) The table can be used with the leaf taken out. This table is an impressive size. The table shows its honourable scars of its history from the timber being used in the Georgian period and then in its second life, serving its owners. We have only sympathetically restored this to its current condition ready for you to enjoy. Imagine the joy and pride you will get as you entertain your family and friends around this dining table. "There is scarcely anything in the world that some man cannot make a little worse and sell a little more cheaply. The person who buys on price alone..."
