Description

A handsome and good quality antique George III gentleman's mahogany dressing table cabinet dating from circa 1800. Serpentine in form with hinged twin covers which open out to reveal an array of fitted compartments, complete with folding easel mirror as well as a brush and scent jars. It has a drawer above a cupboard with a pair of panelled doors and a further drawer to the base, all with original turned ebony handles. It stands on square legs united by an attractively shaped X-under tier. In good original condition, the beautifully figured mahogany with good original warm patina. Would make a wonderful statement piece in a bathroom or bedroom, offering lots of useful storage for clothes or towels and toiletries etc. Construction: Mahogany Condition Report: Good colour and figuring to the mahogany. Mirror plate is old, and foxed with specs and loss of silver, appears original – nicely aged. General wear and marks commensurate with age. Small piece of veneer missing to one corner at front. An old solid small mend, visible to interior of cover (see photo). Dimensions: Height: 90cm Width: 51cm Depth: 49cm Top Drawer Internal: 12cm High x 42cm Wide x 40cm Deep Cup...
