Description

A Regency rosewood drum table dating to circa 1820. The circular top sits over a shallow frieze containing four mahogany-lined drawers with brass knobs, interspersed with five opposing dummy fronts. Raised on a turned central column above a triform base with reeded scrolled feet and concealed castors. Presented with two working keys. A finely constructed piece showcasing well-figured rosewood grain, ideal as a centre table, occasional table or decorative accent in a hallway, library or living room.
