Description

A Handsome Pair of Early 19thC, Regency Fruitwood Country Chair C1820, Dish Seat and Dry Surface. A superbly stylish, early 19th century pair of fruitwood country chair of elegant design with a pronounced dish shape or saddle seat and established dry surface and great colour. The regency design, tbc circa 1810-1830 English country chair is both well constructed and remains in excellent structural condition, showing handsome design features with turned supports and tapering legs, bar back and dry fruitwood surface with a solid saddle seat, a very nice example from all sides. A versatile pair of English country house chairs for an entrance hall, farmhouse kitchen dayroom, study or dressing room, landing etc., an interior design chair of considerable decorative appeal with excellent colour for a classic or contemporary space.
