Description

This enchanting Edwardian necklace is a beautiful example of early 20th-century elegance, gracefully combining aquamarine and seed pearls in a classic drop pendant design. Handcrafted in 9ct gold, the pendant features a delicate circular aquamarine at the top, joined by a fine double knife-edge bar accented with a single seed pearl. This refined arrangement suspends a second aquamarine below, allowing it to move gently with the wearer. The pendant is finished with an elegant arched bale and hangs from a fine trace link chain, secured by a traditional 9ct gold barrel clasp. With its ethereal blue hues and soft lustre, this antique necklace sits beautifully at the collarbone and adds a touch of vintage romance to any ensemble. Pendant drop: 5cm (2") Chain length: 16" (41cm) Aquamarines: Circular-cut, approx. 5.5mm Seed pearl: approx. 2mm Weight: 3.5 grams Metal: Pendant tests as 9ct gold, clasp stamped 9ct Period: Edwardian, circa 1910 Condition: In excellent original condition Presentation: Comes in the box illustrated Our Ref: 23234 A graceful and feminine jewel, perfect for marking a special occasion or adding a timeless heirloom to your collection.
