Description

These exquisite Japanese Meiji period sculptures depict two patinated bronze monkeys, showcasing the artistry and craftsmanship of the era. The larger monkey, seated with a contemplative expression, contrasts with the smaller, more playful figure standing beside it. Both are mounted on a polished hardwood stand, enhancing their elegance. The intricate detailing of their fur and facial features reflects the naturalistic style popular during the Meiji period, symbolizing the harmonious relationship between humans and nature. These pieces not only serve as decorative art but also as a testament to the cultural significance of wildlife in Japanese artistry of the time. Signed. Batch 84. G476/24 TNYZ
