Description

The antique bread flat-weaves or 'sofreh' from the region of Kamo are now extremely rare and this fabulous sofreh was a rare find in Iran recently. It looks as if the weaver gathered together as much natural-dye wool as she could find, including camel-hair, and desperately requiring a flat-weave to knead the dough for making bread, she used all that wool to make this woven work of art! I love it! I love the creativity that these tribal women put into everyday, utilitarian items like this sofreh, made specifically for their own use and never intended to be sold or bartered. Imagine this hanging on the wall? Forget a Mondrian or Klee! This is true tribal art. Size: 1.19m x 1.12m (3' 11" x 3' 8").
