Description

Small 'chantehs' or vanity-bags like this one are extremely scarce now in Iran, although this one arrived a few days ago which was found in the area of Fars. Dating to the last quarter of the nineteenth century, the face of the chanteh is in fine, glossy, knotted-pile and depicting a large symbolic lozenge, outlined in ivory, in the centre. All the colours are from beautiful organic dyes, including the narrow, horizontal bands of colour on the plain-weave back and it is in excellent, original condition. Size: 27cm (11") square.

Internal Ref: BM/Kashkuli
