Description

A Belle Époque French dining table crafted in elm, dating from the late 19th to early 20th century. The table has an extending rectangular top with a warm-toned elm veneer arranged in a symmetrical pattern, showing varied grain and figure. It stands on four cabriole legs with slight splay and features a single frieze drawer with a key and tassel. Its extending mechanism allows for versatile use, combining decorative craftsmanship with practical dining functionality.
