A Georgian bookcase cabinet of small proportions, circa 1800 and later, the top with stepped pediment over a pair of astragal glazed doors, the interior with two adjustable shelves with moulded front edges, the base with a pair of panelled doors with cockbeaded edges and single shelf to the interior, raised on bracket feet. A handsome and useable piece of relatively small proportions. The top and bottom sections may well be a marriage but stand well together, the top had a replacement lock and there is some fading to the front of the bottom right hand door. 198cm high, 109cm wide, the bottom 42cm deep.
