Description

Alfred Grenfell Haigh British, (1880-1963) Braydon Oil on canvas, signed & dated 1913, further inscribed Braydon Image size: 22.5 inches x 29.5 inches Size including frame: 28.5 inches x 35.5 inches A fine sporting horse portrait of a bay hunter called Braydon by Alfred Grenfell Haigh. The horse is depicted standing with his head slightly turned towards the viewer to reveal a white stripe down his face. In keeping with his use as a hunter of the period, the horse has a bob tail and his coat has been clipped for winter in a traditional hunter clip. This particular clip includes an unclipped saddle shaped patch on his back for cushioning and unclipped legs to protect them during jumping or cross-country work. Braydon's owner most likely commissioned the portrait in order to commemorate his successes, perhaps before being sold on. Alfred Grenfell Haigh was born at Leighton Banastre, Parkgate, Cheshire on 28 February, 1870. He was the son of Reginald Haigh, a cotton broker and Flora Masini Grenfell. He was educated at Ellery School in Liscard, Cheshire and later attended the Rossall Art School near Blackpool, where he won prizes for drawing. Haigh then continued his artis...
