Description

Regency Cut Brass Inlaid Rosewood Sofa Table Circa 1820 | Exceptional Craftsmanship | Timeless Elegance

Description This outstanding Regency period sofa table showcases the refined artistry and sophistication characteristic of early 19th-century English furniture. Crafted in richly figured rosewood, the table is beautifully inlaid with fine cut brass detailing that accentuates its clean lines and classical proportions. The rectangular top features two drop leaves, allowing you to extend the surface as needed. A delicate brass inlay borders the perimeter, enhancing the warm glow of the rosewood veneers. The front of the table is fitted with two working drawers, offering practical storage with elegant brass knobs and period locks. To maintain symmetry, the rear is designed with two corresponding false drawers, achieving a balanced and harmonious appearance from all sides. The piece stands on elegant lyre-shaped supports united by a turned stretcher for added stability. The sabre legs are carved and terminate in brass-capped castors, ensuring easy movement while preserving a stately presence. "There is scarcely anything in the world t...
