Description

This is an antique Windsor rocking chair, an English, elm and ash porch or fireside rocker, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1900. Traditionally appealing form with a gentle, smooth rocking motion. Crafted in a combination of elm and ash, with rich caramel hues and excellent grain interest. Tall back rest with classic hoop design, dressed with turned ash spindles for timeless character. Horseshoe arms terminate in elegant turned out scrolled knuckles. Deeply shaped elm squab seat with distinctive scalloped sides for added comfort and visual charm. Stands upon classic turned legs and stretchers, offering strength and stability. Long rockers provide a calming, easy rhythm — perfect for relaxed settings. Ideal for use on a veranda, porch or beside the fireside, with distinctive country house appeal. A superb example of English country craftsmanship, this Victorian Windsor rocker delivers both comfort and timeless style for the traditional interior. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home.
