Description

An elegant antique Georgian mahogany campaign tripod table dating from circa 1820. The column is beautifully turned with a fine almost delicate quality in wonderfully patinated mahogany with ebonised details. The top is made from a single piece of mahogany and features a slightly raised lip with reeded edge and a bracing bar underneath to strengthen it and give the depth for a screw fitting. The top unscrews from its column which in turn, unscrews from the tripod base. An ebonised and moulded collar fits above the base, through which the turned column passes and is secured in place by a threaded wooden collar underneath the base. The lack of glue and the wear to this piece is consistent with this table having been made to be dismantled by design rather than simply being a constructional feature and hence a piece of genuine campaign furniture. A very useful and elegant small sized piece that would make a great lamp table. Construction/Wood: Mahogany Condition Report: Solid and sturdy, good colour and patina, with wear and marks commensurate with age. Top has a small well-executed old mend to the lip. An old solid mend to the base. A small chip to centre of the the...
