Description

Morning Mist over Ben Lawers: Highland Cattle by Loch Tay By Tom Seymour (1844–1904) — Oil on Canvas, circa 1880 Subject & Medium Morning Mist over Ben Lawers: Highland Cattle by Loch Tay is an atmospheric Highland landscape by Victorian painter Tom Seymour. The first light of dawn glimmers across Loch Tay, with the commanding presence of Ben Lawers softened by drifting morning mist. In the right mid-ground, a rustic stone croft nestles into the hillside, blending seamlessly into the rugged terrain and symbolising the endurance of human life within wild nature. In the foreground, a clear mountain stream tumbles over mossy rocks, catching the early light as it winds into the valley. At the heart of the composition stand three Highland longhorn cattle grazing peacefully among the heather. Their shaggy coats glow in russet, brown, and golden tones, contrasting warmly with the silvery coolness of dawn. Seymour's oil on canvas balances permanence with atmosphere — sturdy rocks and animals anchored below a luminous, misty expanse. Composition & Technique Seymour arranges the canvas with layered depth and atmospheric subtlety: Foreground: A rocky stream framed by heather draws t...
