Description

Alfred Moginie Bryant British, (1855-1935) Sunshine Oil on canvas, signed & dated (18)90 Image size: 17.75 inches x 23.75 inches Size including frame: 26.5 inches x 32.5 inches A fine sporting horse portrait of a chestnut hunter called Sunshine in a stable by Alfred Moginie Bryant. The mare is depicted facing right with her head slightly turned towards the viewer to reveal a wide white stripe running down her face. Her hind leg bears a distinctive white sock. Sunshine was a chestnut mare foaled in 1887, by Fetterlock. She was owned by Mr Charles Matthew Prior of Adstock Manor, Winslow in Buckinghamshire. He most likely commissioned the portrait to commemorate the horse in some way, perhaps with a view to selling her on. Alfred Moginie Bryant was born in Huntingdon, Cambridgeshire in 1855, the son of Charles Bryant and Susan Moginie His father was a silk merchant and draper who ran a successful business in Huntingdon High Street employing several staff. Although his other brothers went on to work for the family business, Alfred's talent for art led him in a different direction. Given his father's success in business, it is highly likely that Bryant received artistic ...
