Description

A good example of an original Naval fire bucket dating from the mid to late 19th Century. It is a wooden construction with brass coopered bands and it has its original leather bound rope handle. It has a nice polychrome royal coat of arms applied to the front of the bucket. It is in very good condition for its age. It has a wonderful patina with signs of age and use but no major damages. There are some small marks and knocks and some wear to the leather handle and stitching and some wear to the coat of arms but nothing detrimental and it displays well. Approximate Measurements: Height to rim : 12" (30cm) Diameter : 12 1/2" (32cm) Width including handles : 16" (41cm) The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
