Description

Jaeger-LeCoultre Brass 8 - Day Straight Lined Skeleton Mantel Clock -1950 Boxed Design and Materials: It features a square gilded brass frame and a transparent Perspex dial, often noted for its minimalist aesthetic and ability to showcase the intricate inner workings of the clock. The hour markers are typically gilded square studs or blocks. Movement: This clock houses a 16-jewel "baguette" or "inline" skeleton bridge manual wind movement, meaning the components are arranged in a straight line, visible through the transparent case. Origin: Made by Jaeger-LeCoultre in La Chaux-de-Fons, Switzerland. Functionality: As an 8-day timepiece, it requires winding approximately once a week to maintain its operation. Historical Context: This model embodies the linear and refined aesthetic prevalent in mid-century design, making it a notable piece for collectors of vintage clocks.
