Description

This is a large antique display bookcase, an English walnut breakfront library cabinet dating to the Regency period, circa 1820. A piece of superb Regency craftsmanship, boasting striking colour, refined detail and wonderful proportion. Traditional breakfront form, with a commanding central cabinet flanked by a pair of glazed doors. Crafted from select walnut stocks, offering light caramel hues and superb grain figuring. Finest quality boxwood inlay accentuates the apron and field panel door with tasteful contrast. Doors finished with matched locks, complete with working key present. Shelves dressed in original velvet, with exposed walnut across each leading edge. Ormolu mounts add a refined and ornate flourish in keeping with Regency taste. Standing upon a plinth base with shaped apron and a well-presented panelled rear. Perfect for those seeking a statement library cabinet with elegant Regency character, this antique display bookcase is a striking example, showcasing fine craftsmanship, decorative detail and enduring quality. Excellent scale and presence, suitable for a library, drawing room or grand reception hall. Solid joints and construction, delivered ready for the home...
