Description

A Pair of Original Anglo Indian Teak and Cane Plantation Chairs circa 1910-1920. A handsome pair of well constructed, original Anglo Indian antique plantation chairs, circa 1910 to 1920, with strong teak frames and cane seats. A fine quality plantation chair model with extending fold away arms, peg joint construction presented in mostly excellent condition. It is rare to find an original matching pair, following the traditional early 20th century design and now highly popular and desirable patio or conservatory chairs, even for use internally, sun lounge chairs etc. A robust teak frame, structurally excellent and without wobbles, repairs or loss. A matching pair whilst 1 has had more sunlight and/or element exposure and presents marginally more pale where sun has bleached the frame and stain/oil, easily returned to match the other while it also adds authenticity and character. Both of the chairs are considered in very good condition. The more pale of the 2 has a tiny defect in a small area of cane at the front of its seat, please see photos and a little more timeworn patination but otherwise very good, stable chairs of excellent design. A superbly stylish pair of pl...
