Description

A rare and charming survivor from 18th-century North Wales - a primitive boarded child's commode chair in painted sycamore, full of rustic character and social history. Date: 18th century Origin: North Wales, United Kingdom Material: Painted sycamore Construction: Primitive boarded form with integral arms and high backrest Finish: Original or early painted surface with age-worn patina Condition: Structurally sound; surface wear and marks consistent with age and use Dimensions: H: 50cm (19.7") | W: 34cm (13.4") | D: 27cm (10.6") Delivery: Not included - please use the Request Delivery Quote feature before completing your order Heritage & Craftsmanship This modest yet evocative piece would once have been a familiar sight in rural Welsh homes. Made from sycamore boards - a timber valued for its durability and resistance to staining - it was built for daily use, yet retains a quiet dignity in its simple lines and honest construction. The painted finish, now softly worn, adds to its charm and authenticity. Children's commodes of this period rarely survive, as they were often discarded once outgrown. This example's survival for over two centuries is a testament to the quality...
