Description

Art Deco Smith's See-Through Mystery Clock – Chrome & Bakelite, Circa 1930s. A rare and visually captivating Art Deco see-through mystery clock by Smith's Electronic Clocks, circa 1930s. This iconic timepiece features a chrome body with rich Bakelite detailing, and a transparent dial that gives the illusion of floating hands—a hallmark of the mystery clock design. Known for its innovation, Smith's Electronic Clocks created these clocks to showcase cutting-edge engineering and striking modernist aesthetics. The hands appear to float and move independently without visible connection to the mechanism, offering both function and fascination.
