Description

An exceptional Edwardian revolving bookcase in well-figured, richly coloured mahogany with chequer-banded inlay, satinwood stringing and decorative inlaid panels. Designed with two tiers of open book storage divided into quarters, the whole rotates smoothly on a cast iron base raised on original large ceramic and brass castors. Intended for practical use beside a chair or desk, keeping a small selection of books within easy reach from all sides. The decorative details are subtle but incredibly well-executed. The design reflects the Edwardian fascination with classical revival styles, echoing Regency elegance in a more compact, functional form. Presented in excellent antique condition. The mechanism rotates well, the castors run smoothly, and the mahogany shows a warm aged patina with only very minor surface wear. Structurally sound, perfectly clean and ready to place in the home. English, circa 1910. H: 85.5 W: 49 D: 49 cm
