Description

Grand Early Victorian Mahogany Wind-out Dining Table. A fine and elegant Early Victorian Mahogany Wind-Out dining table Circa 1850 . Presenting a superb example of a mid-19th-century dining table, this piece exudes the rich elegance and craftsmanship characteristic of the Victorian era. Crafted from a beautifully figured mahogany, it retains its original idyllic lightly faded and lustrous French polished finish, which showcases the timber's warm tones and rich patina built over its long history. This table has been thoroughly checked over in our workshop, where it has been cleaned and waxed to bring out the best of its original character. It is a versatile and practical piece, complete with its two original leaves, allowing it to be extended to accommodate larger gatherings. Without the leaves, it comfortably seats four people. With one leaf in place, it can seat six, and with both leaves, it can accommodate a dinner party of eight, or even up to ten people depending on the chairs used. Unlike many wind-out tables, this example is remarkably stable and flat when fully extended, running true and straight—a testament to its exceptional construction and care. The winding...
