Description

An Unusually Large Antique Georgian Cut Glass Tea Mixing Bowl richly decorated with alternating diamond cutting and fluted bands, creating a striking interplay of light and texture. Bowls of this type were used in tea preparation, when loose-leaf tea was blended at home before brewing – a luxury ritual of the Georgian household – circa 1800. * Originally functional for mixing teas, now equally desirable as a decorative display piece or serving bowl. Measurements: Height: 5 1/2" (approx. 14cm) Diameter across top: 5" (approx. 12.5cm) Total weight: 802g In good condition – Good antique condition with minor wear and faint surface scratches consistent with age and use. No major chips or cracks, presenting beautifully.
