Description

A fine antique Edwardian commode chair dating from the early 20th century. Crafted in mahogany, the piece features scrolled arms, turned supports, and a lift-up seat concealing the original porcelain insert. The panelled sides and rich mahogany colour highlight the quality craftsmanship of the period. This example survives in particularly good condition, with clean woodwork and the desirable original ceramic bowl intact. A practical piece in its time, today it makes for an unusual and decorative addition to a bedroom, bathroom, or period interior. The chair is offered in very good antique condition, solid and ready to be placed. A rare find with original porcelain insert, adding both charm and authenticity. We kindly ask you to review our delivery terms prior to purchase.
