Description

Here's another first for me....this is an 18thc "lacemakers /ribbon makers" oak and pine "frame"....the lady would sit at the front of the frame and pull the lace or ribbon off as she needed it, having previously wound the lace / ribbon around the top rail....it has had plenty of careful use as the stretchers and top rail are nicely worn and it has gained a wonderful mellow colour....I love this piece of social history and could see this happily placed in a cottage, still being used today, not for lace / ribbon, but maybe a very nice towel rail...picture rest....dog lead holder....the list is endless....in original condition and a real treasure..! English /Yorkshire. C1760-70.
