Description

A handsome George II period walnut veneered drawing table; the top beautifully chevron veneered in walnut and crossbanded in rosewood with a gallery running around three sides above a pull-out drawer which opens to reveal a baize lined drawing surface; this can then be pushed back to reveal storage compartments; raised on square chamfered legs. Circa 1730. This drawing table is beautifully made with crisply cast brass work and the veneers have been carefully chosen to show off the walnut veneers to their best effect. The table is finished on the back so that it can be free standing if desired.
