Description

A fine antique mahogany sideboard in the Hepplewhite style, dating from the late 19th to early 20th century. The piece is beautifully proportioned, featuring a serpentine front with central drawer and arched apron, flanked by two cupboards. The richly figured mahogany veneers are complemented by delicate satinwood inlay, highlighting the elegant lines of the piece. The sideboard stands on slender tapered legs, typical of the neoclassical revival style, and retains its original brass handles. Offering both charm and practicality, it provides ample storage while serving as a refined decorative statement for any dining room, hallway or living space. Approximate measurements: height 95 cm width 153 cm depth 54 cm. The sideboard is presented in very good condition, ready to be placed and enjoyed. A distinguished addition to both traditional and eclectic interiors.
