Height: 43", (109cm), Width: 21", (53.5cm) Depth: 21", (53.5cm) Daniel Marot (1662 – 1752) Born in Paris in about 1662, the son of Jean Marot a well known architect and engraver. In his youth he worked with his father and gained quite a reputation as an engraver enjoying patronage from the crown. Marot was a Protestant and in 1684, the year before the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, sought refuge in Holland, where almost immediately he entered the service of the Prince of Orange. In 1686, he is found at The Hague where he designed the Audience Chamber. He was appointed Master of the Works to the Prince and d...
