Description

A fine Edwardian oak wardrobe, dating from around 1910 and made in England. This beautifully proportioned piece features a central full-length mirrored door flanked by two oak panels, each decorated with carved bird motifs. Beneath, a deep drawer provides additional storage, while the shaped plinth base and original brass hardware add to its period charm. The oak has developed a warm, rich patina over more than a century, giving depth and character to the piece. The wardrobe is offered in very good antique condition. Minor marks, scratches and surface wear are present, consistent with age and use. No key is present, though this does not affect functionality. A handsome and practical Edwardian wardrobe, full of charm and ready to place in any traditional or vintage-inspired interior
