Description

A fine Victorian tea caddy dating from around 1880, crafted in mahogany and designed in the desirable sarcophagus form. The hinged lid with tablet top and sloping sides opens to reveal two fitted lift-out canisters along with a central glass mixing bowl set within a velvet-lined compartment. The tapering body sits on compressed bun feet, adding both elegance and stability to the piece. With its rich patina and well-proportioned form, this caddy embodies the refinement of late 19th-century craftsmanship. Condition: In good antique order with age-related wear, marks, and surface imperfections, consistent with over 140 years of use. These details only enhance its genuine Victorian charm. A highly decorative and functional piece for collectors of fine antiques or those looking to add a touch of Victorian elegance to their home.
