Description

A fine Edwardian window table dating from circa 1910, crafted in walnut with a warm polished finish. The octagonal top provides both elegance and practicality, raised on inverted scroll legs joined by a decorative galleried undertier, offering additional display space. This rare and attractive piece combines charm with versatility, making it ideal for use as a side table, occasional table, or as a statement piece in a bay window setting. Condition: Presented in very good antique order, free from damage, with only light age-related wear consistent with its age, which adds to the table's authentic character. A beautiful example of Edwardian craftsmanship, ready to be placed and enjoyed in any traditional or period-inspired interior.
