Description

A fine example of an Antique George III oak tripod table, dating back to circa 1780. This elegant piece features a well-proportioned circular top with a beautiful patina, raised on a turned column and supported by three gracefully splayed legs. The craftsmanship and simplicity of the design make it a timeless addition to any period or contemporary setting. Offered in very good antique condition, with minor age-related marks and wear, all consistent with over two centuries of use. The table remains solid and sturdy, free from structural damage. Would look stunning in a drawing room, hallway, or as a statement side table.
