Description

A fine Edwardian mahogany display cabinet, distinguished by its elegant proportions and refined detailing. The cabinet features twin astragal-glazed doors opening to three lined display shelves, ideal for books, porcelain, or collectables. The mahogany is accented with delicate string inlay, and the cabinet is surmounted by an ornate broken swan-neck pediment with dental moulding. Raised on slender tapering legs with an under-tier shelf and shaped apron, this is a classic example of Edwardian craftsmanship. Very Good antique condition. The cabinet retains its original polished patina, with minor signs of age and use consistent with its history. Glass intact, doors close securely, and shelves remain sturdy. This Edwardian display cabinet makes an elegant statement piece for a sitting room, dining room, or hallway, providing both practical storage and timeless decorative appeal.
