Description

This is a trio of antique sauce dishes. An English, silver plated condiment pot set, dating to the Edwardian period, circa 1910. Delightfully presented, these small serving dishes offer a refined way to present condiments at the dinner table. Crafted in quality silver plate with a reflective, lightly time-worn finish. Tactile, gently arched handles opposite raised pouring spouts. Wavy swag finish to the dish edges adds decorative interest. Each raised upon shaped feet, ensuring stability on the table. Maker's marks to the base - two dishes by Mappin & Webb and one by Lee & Wigfull. Ideal for presenting mustards, sauces, or relishes in elegant style. This antique trio of silver plated condiment pots is a delightful addition to a refined dining table, offering Edwardian charm and enduring quality craftsmanship. Delivered ready for the table. Dimensions: Max Width: 8.5cm (3.25") Max Depth: 15cm (6") Max Height: 9cm (3.5")
