Description

An exceptional 18th-century gateleg table crafted from solid walnut and oak, showcasing timeless English craftsmanship and elegant proportions. The table features a single drawer with original wooden knobs and beautifully turned baluster legs connected by sturdy stretchers. Its drop-leaf design allows the table to be extended for dining or folded compactly for occasional use, making it both practical and decorative. The rich patina and natural grain of the oak top, complemented by the walnut frame, bring out the table's warm antique character. A fine example of Georgian-era furniture with all the charm and authenticity of the period. Width (extended): 153 cm. Excellent antique condition with minor signs of age consistent with use. The surface has a lovely aged finish, adding to its charm and authenticity.
