Description

Elegant Victorian Pembroke table crafted from solid mahogany, dating from the late 19th century (circa 1880). The table features two drop leaves that can be raised to create a larger surface when needed, making it both functional and space-saving. It stands on finely turned legs with original brass castors for easy movement and includes a single drawer with its original brass key escutcheon. The beautiful grain of the mahogany and warm patina give this piece timeless charm — perfect as a side table, small dining table, or writing desk. Width: 96 cm leaves extended A lovely example of classic Victorian craftsmanship — practical, elegant, and full of character.
