Description

A charming solid oak bureau dating from the early 20th century, presented in excellent original condition. This piece bears a brass presentation plaque inscribed: "Presented to T.H. Meale by the Staff, W.R. Asylum on his retirement, July 31st, 1924." — adding both provenance and character. The bureau features a fall-front writing surface that opens to reveal neatly arranged compartments and pigeonholes for letters and stationery. Below are three drawers with their original brass handles and locks, offering generous storage. The front is decorated with geometric moulded panels, and the piece stands on turned legs united by shaped stretchers. A beautiful and practical example of early 20th-century English craftsmanship — elegant, functional, and full of history.
